FAMILY LIFE

raised my kids because of the Postal Service. And I've bred two wonderful young ladies that are just the joy of my life. And, if it weren't for the Postal Service I-uh-who knows what my life would be now? And my life would not be nearly as rewarding as it is now. And, and, also, it's not just-not just the job, it's the sense of self esteem that kinda this-this position gives you. You-you feel like you are somebody and it-there's so many different tasks involved in my job, I'm in a smaller office- it's a level fifteen- but, there's so many things that I do and interact with the customers and I'm a manager and, um, and I do-I do a great job. So, I do my-my manager has me- I do a lot of different tasks for him, like when I do office transfers. Like, when a postmaster goes into a new office, he sends me to do it and I do it. Newsletter from my area and, uh, I just so a lot of different things that kind of are above and beyond what I have to do.
